Reasons for returns

- Reasons for IDPs returning to Sinjar include their desire to go home, as well as the improved security situation in their areas of origin, while Mukhtars, local NGOs and returnees have also encouraged IDPs to return home. Threats facing eviction in locations of displacement is also a factor for those IDPs returning to Sinjar. Otherwise, the main reason for IDPs returning to Al-Ba’aj also relates to their desire to go home, while the availability of services (such as education and health) in their areas of origin is also central to the decision.

- One of the push factors has been COVID-19 pandemic, as some families who had a member working in the area of origin and moving back and forth between Sinjar and an area of displacement could no longer move easily due to movement restrictions, which then pushed the IDPs to return.

- Challenges faced by returnees

  - Debris removal has been noted as an obstacle to return, given the large-scale destruction that took place in Sinjar.

  - There are reports of individuals having returned to areas with limited basic services such as healthcare, markets, water, and electricity and having not received assistance. Some of these locations had not previously witnessed any returns.
