Message from the President & the Secretary General

2015 was a significant year for Maldivian Red Crescent in the humanitarian sphere, with successes and learning experiences. Last year entailed opportunities for MRC to provide invaluable humanitarian services not only to the local communities but also to international crises that came with trust, acceptance and expectations from the communities. Our strengths and capabilities in the area of Disaster Risk Management continue to enable our branches in preparing their communities, building capacities and in responding to disasters and epidemics nation-wide. In addition, notable efforts were put into streamlining the continuity of the humanitarian services that MRC provides by paving the path towards a more locally resourced model, and therefore increasing the sustainability of the organization in the years to come.

Over the years and especially in 2015, MRC has established strong relationships with the government and worked hand in hand as part of the auxiliary role. It is time now to foster these relationships and strengthen the auxiliary support to enable us in providing sustainable services in building resilient communities. We would like to sincerely acknowledge the support from the government thus far and request for further assistance to invest in diversifying and maintaining our humanitarian assistance across the country.

Being a volunteer-member driven local national organization, it is crucial that the services MRC provide to the communities are addressing the humanitarian needs of the communities. As such, we focused on putting effort into strengthening the branches, capacitating the branches in identifying community needs and providing services through decentralized mechanisms. Branch personnel, including members and volunteers were trained in various areas to strengthen branch implementation capacities.

To continue to deliver humanitarian services as an independent and relevant self-sustainable organization, MRC has yet a long road ahead. However, notable efforts were put into opening up avenues and opportunities domestically to diversify income streams. With regards to this, new relationships and friendships with various public and private organizations were established and relationships established over years of collaboration together were further strengthened.

We are thankful for our movement partners, such as IFRC, ICRC, Canadian Red Cross and Australian Red Cross, for being our primary funders up until now. However, the Tsunami Residual funding which constitutes the primary international donation is coming to a halt by the end of 2016, putting us in a challenging and trying situation. As such, major efforts were put in place last year, to minimize the core cost and expenditures of the organization to align with the financial situation. With respect to this, the organization was restructured to align with the available funding and efforts were put into expediting the construction of the Red Crescent Building Project, which could potentially bring income to sustain our core costs and services.

The development and adoption of the Strategic Plan 2016-2019 was a major milestone of 2015. The Plan was adopted at the 6th General Assembly. Following that, along with the technical support from Canadian Red Cross, MRC paved way for its first four year Integrated Operational Plan and budgeting, with the purpose of streamlining services towards a more sustainable, and integrated approach. This is a remarkable achievement, as this the first time such an approach of integrated planning and budgeting was adopted, which would pave way for further minimizing costs and looking into ways of low cost implementation of services.

As we continue to firm our roots as a neutral, impartial and independent, volunteer-member driven national humanitarian service provider, we have achieved greater heights in the services we provide to the people across communities. This and more could not be achieved without the tireless and invaluable efforts of our volunteers and members, without the support of our generous partners and our dedicated staff who put immeasurable hours and compromises to this cause. Our sincere gratitude is shared with them and everyone who has followed our cause and been a supporter. Thank you.

Closure and exit strategy of CBDRR project

The Community-Based Disaster Risk Reduction (CBDRR) programme which was funded by the Canadian Red Cross, included components of integrated preparedness, mitigation and response to increase resiliency in Maldivian communities. The project has been officially closed with final evaluations completed.

Reflecting back on increasing community resilience, MRC has worked closely with four target communities in areas of preparedness, mitigation and response. The move away from the traditional DM model and using the resilience model allowed the project to broaden its focus to address priorities highlighted in the VCA’s. This includes soft mitigation projects and mitigation activities addressing solid waste management, water shortage, erosion, dengue outbreaks, and youth related social issues such as drugs, which were all needs addressed by the communities and prioritized as such through participatory methods for information collection.

Training and mobilizing community volunteers to lead community activities has also increased ownership of the project in the target communities. Volunteers trained are recognized by the local stakeholder and the community and are mobilized to conduct community activities. The project has contributed significantly to increase the awareness of local stakeholders. However the general awareness level of the community needs to be evaluated to measure the project’s reach and impact. Some of the local councils have highlighted that community now display more positive behavioural changes, in issues like waste disposal and also shows more support and participation in community activities. The partnerships approach used in the project has also fostered relationships between local stakeholder to work together for common interests and community benefit. Moreover, communities are observed to take preparedness actions such as collecting sand bags and levelling road beforehand to reduce the impact of floods.

Overall, the project has done remarkably well given the challenges faced and this project being the first project of its kind, implemented by MRC. Most of the project’s achievements are in the area of advocacy and building the capacity of the National Society. MRC is now a stakeholder recognized both locally and nationally in the country. MRC is represented in all DM/DRR national and local (communities with MRC presence) platforms of the country. MRC has fostered networks and partnerships with local, national and Movement partners, enabling opportunities for capacity building and resource sharing. The project has been able to develop the necessary policies and frameworks required to ensure continuity of it DM/DRR initiatives beyond the project such as providing technical input to all DRR national policies and frameworks, namely the Disaster Management Bill, National Emergency Response Plan, National Framework of CBDRM, etc.. The project has invested in building the DM/DRR knowledge of the National Society to be able to actively contribute in the area.

MRC partnered with UNICEF Maldives in implementation of some of the outputs of the Programme.

A Project Cooperation Agreement (PCA) between MRC and UNICEF was signed on 21 October 2014 for implementation duration of seven months. The expected output of the PCA was to work towards development of holistic emergency preparedness and response plans in the community, with the inclusion of child and gender sensitivity. Health and Social Wellbeing

Patient Transport Service

MRC piloted a Patient Transport service for 6 months in Malé in 2014. The pilot included providing transport to patients in emergencies (such as heart attacks) and in regular healthcare needs (e.g. for elderly, or dialysis treatment) with two Response Vehicles, two paid staff (driver and an assistant, both trained in first aid), and additional first aiders (consisting of MRC staff) trained in moving and lifting. MRC transported patients ‘bed-to-bed’ from homes to hospitals and vice versa, and provided a one day training in moving and lifting on needs basis.

The pilot enabled MRC to profile itself nationally as a leading provider of bed-to-bed quality patient transport in Maldives. In 2015, The Patient Transport service also started providing dead body transportation service.

For the Patient Transport Service, challenges began to arise as voluntary drivers were used to provide the service; this led to delays in giving the services and cancellations at times. As it was challenging to run the program with one staff, the time frame of the program had to be reduced from 24/7 to the regular office hours. In this regard efforts were put into getting funding support from corporates to cover the running cost of the service.

MRC set up a tent in a public park in the capital Malé in the evenings. At the stall there were members of the psychosocial support team (and Nepali translators from Maldivian Medical Association) available to talk, and psychoeducation materials in Nepali were handed out.

Knowing that many of the Nepali migrant workers would be anxious to re-connect with loved ones at home, the members of the team were given additional training using the PS Centre’s Broken Links material and a computer was set up with access to the ICRC family links website and trained volunteers were ready to assist and support. A telephone hotline was also set up for those who were not able to come or did not want to seek support at the tent.

In order to reach as many people in the Nepali community, MRC printed flyers in Nepali and with the assistance of the authorities they also contacted employers of Nepali migrant workers to ask them to pass on the message about where to get assistance. This resulted in a request for the MRC psychosocial team to go to an island in Laamu atoll which is in the South of Maldives to carry out psychosocial activities for some 135 Nepalese working there.

The Nepalese working there were touched and pleasantly surprised that people from Maldives cared enough about them to travel to a remote island for their wellbeing. At the initial assessment the team found out that one lady had lost her 14 year old son who had gone to visit his paternal aunt living in Lapthang near Tatopani a few days before the first earthquake. Later when her husband went to get his son from that village, it was empty; there was no one there in the village. He has not heard or seen his son or sister’s family since then. The PSS team told her about the ICRC Restoring Family Links website and how it works. Upon her request, the team registered both the lady and her son in the system. Similarly, there were many others who had lost several family members and their homes and were devastated. Most of them felt guilty about having food to eat and a place to live, when their loved ones back home were in such a dire situation.

The team conducted sharing sessions in support groups and took sessions on coping strategies, grief and loss, self-care and peer support using the PS centre materials. In addition, the PSS team provided training in psychological first aid to management staff and some lead Nepali workers so they can continue to support them. The biggest challenge was the language barrier. Using a translator was not effective as the PSS team were unable to gauge if the information passed on and received was accurate. However this issue was solved very creatively as the team found a person who spoke Hindi which both PSS team understood and most Nepalese understood. There were people from countries other than Nepal working there and they wanted to take part in the sharing sessions. They all prayed together for Nepal by holding hands even though there were people of different faith. It was amazing to see how a little act of humanity help them bond”
