 DEADLY ATTACK ON EBOLA TEAM SPARKS POPULATION MOVEMENTS

About 14,000 people have fled violence in Biakato, in eastern Ituri province, and Mangina in Beni territory, North Kivu province, including suspected Ebola cases and contacts. On 3 December, young people attacked a WHO ambulance transporting a suspected Ebola patient. On 5 December, two health posts and one health center in Mangina were also targeted. On 28 November, three Ebola response team members died when armed individuals attacked an Ebola treatment centre in Biakato. These incidents are among the latest that have taken place, disrupting Ebola response activities and prompting many UN agencies and NGOs to relocate to Goma, capital of North-Kivu province. These attacks against Ebola response facilities occur as response activities are at a temporary halt in Beni territory, including Butembo, following popular riots since 23 November.
