GLOBAL PEACE INDEX 2018 SNAPSHOT

MEASURING PEACE IN A COMPLEX WORLD
MEASURING PEACE IN A COMPLEX WORLD

The Global Peace Index 2018 report finds that the global level of peace has deteriorated by 0.27% over the last year. This is the fourth successive year of deterioration, finding that 92 countries have deteriorated, while 71 countries have improved. The report reveals a world in which tensions, conflicts and crises that have emerged over the past decade remain unresolved, causing a gradual, sustained decline in global levels of peacefulness.

2018 key highlights
- 92 countries deteriorated whilst 71 countries improved between 2016 and 2017
- Syria, Afghanistan, South Sudan, Iraq and Somalia are the least peaceful countries in the world
- Iceland, New Zealand, Austria, Portugal and Denmark are the most peaceful countries in the world
- Countries that improved in peace over the last decade had seven times higher GDP growth rates
- Military expenditure compared to country GDP has been steadily falling in more countries than increasing
- Battle deaths have risen steadily over the last 10 years, increasing by 264%

CHANGE IN GPI SCORE 2017–2018

Five largest improvements & deteriorations
In the 2018 GPI, 92 countries deteriorated while 71 countries improved, with the global average deteriorating by 0.27 per cent. This is the highest number of countries to deteriorate in peacefulness in a single year since the 2010 GPI.

The average global level of Positive Peace increased steadily between 2005 and 2013. However, this trend levelled out in the two years to 2015, after which Positive Peace deteriorated in 2016.

Positive Peace is defined as the attitudes, structures and institutions that underpin and sustain peaceful societies.
