SITUATION OVERVIEW

Seven years into the armed conflict in the Syrian Arab Republic, the humanitarian situation continues to deteriorate. Over 13 million people are still in need of humanitarian assistance inside Syria, including 6.1 million internally displaced (IDPs). Nearly 3 million people are living in hard to reach and or besieged areas. In addition, nearly 5.5 million Syrians have taken refuge in the five neighboring countries of Lebanon, Jordan, Turkey, Iraq and Egypt.

Some areas of relative stability are emerging in Syria. IOM tracked 850,000 internally displaced people returning to their areas of origin during 2017. During the same period, however, a far greater number (2.9 million) continued to flee their homes, illustrating the continuing adverse effect of violence and conflict on the Syrian population.

IOM will continue to provide life-saving and sustaining assistance as well as early recovery and resilience support to displaced Syrian communities and host communities inside Syria and in the region.

In 2018, IOM is appealing to the international community for USD 193,767,960.

STORIES FROM THE FIELD: TURKEY

IOM LIVELIHOOD PROGRAMME FOR SYRIAN REFUGEES IN TURKEY

Starting over is never easy, especially as one gets older. Forty-five-year-old Hassan lost nearly everything in a split second as his business, home and savings were all consumed by the battle of Aleppo.

Along with his family, Hassan fled to his father’s home in Aleppo province where he began building a new home for his family. As the war inched closer and closer, Hassan’s main concern was his families safety. Fearing for their lives, he moved his family to Turkey.

Once in Turkey, Hassan wanted to rebuild his life for the third time. However, without speaking the language, it was difficult to find employment, and he saw no alternative but to work irregularly without health insurance or any certainty that his employer would pay him at the end of the month.

Through IOM’s job initiation project under the Livelihood programme which helps Syrian refugees find regular employment, Hassan received his Turkish work permit and signed a one-year contract with a Turkish company in July 2017. Hassan is no longer dependent on humanitarian assistance and is able to provide for his family and contribute to the local economy.

“After years of fear and uncertainty, my family finally has some stability,” said Hassan. “My daughters can be children once again and I can begin building the foundations for their future.

IOM SCHOOL BUS TRANSPORTATION PROJECT IN AZRAQ CAMP, JORDAN

Ameena and Abu Hamzeh are from Homs, Syria, but currently live in Jordan’s Azraq refugee camp with their four children. Their three school-age kids attend the public school ran by the Jordanian Ministry of Education inside the camp. Since 2016, IOM, in collaboration with UNICEF, has been implementing a school bus project in the camp. The service will benefit more than 9,000 Syrian students in 2018.

Located in central Jordan, the camp lies on a desert flatland where conditions are harsh year-round. Prior to the introduction of the school bus service, children as young as six had to walk as far as two kilometres each way. Older siblings would accompany their younger brother or sister, but this often meant that they had to make the commute twice a day, as girls go to school in the morning and boys in the afternoon. This ultimately discouraged parents from sending their children to school.

Ameena is one of the 66 bus escorts currently volunteering with the school transportation project. She makes sure that the children ride the bus safely, continuously monitors the number of children on the bus and checks their ID cards to keep a register of the children on the bus.

“People in the camp, our neighbors and friends, support the initiative of school bus transportation. They are more encouraged to send the kids to school because they feel that they are safe,” said Ameena proudly. “Not to mention that the kids are much more excited to go to school by bus!”

The volunteer bus escorts are selected based on the procedures that regulate cash for work activities in Azraq camp. These procedures ensure that residents of the camp have equal and transparent access to cash for work opportunities.

“I encourage every family and advise them to enroll their kids in school, because education must be a priority and it will provide a better future for their kids,” said Abu Hamzeh, stressing the importance of education.

The project also provides special assistance to children living with disabilities. The escorts are trained to help children with disabilities and the buses are adapted to their needs.
