

A surge in violence between armed groups and Government forces has displaced over 1.2 million people in central and northern Iraq since January 2014. Violence has been most intense in Anbar Province, where approximately 700,000 people have been displaced by fighting centred on Fallujah and Ramadi. In June, armed groups took control of Iraq's second city of Mosul, leading to the displacement of over 500,000 people, many of whom fled with few or no resources.

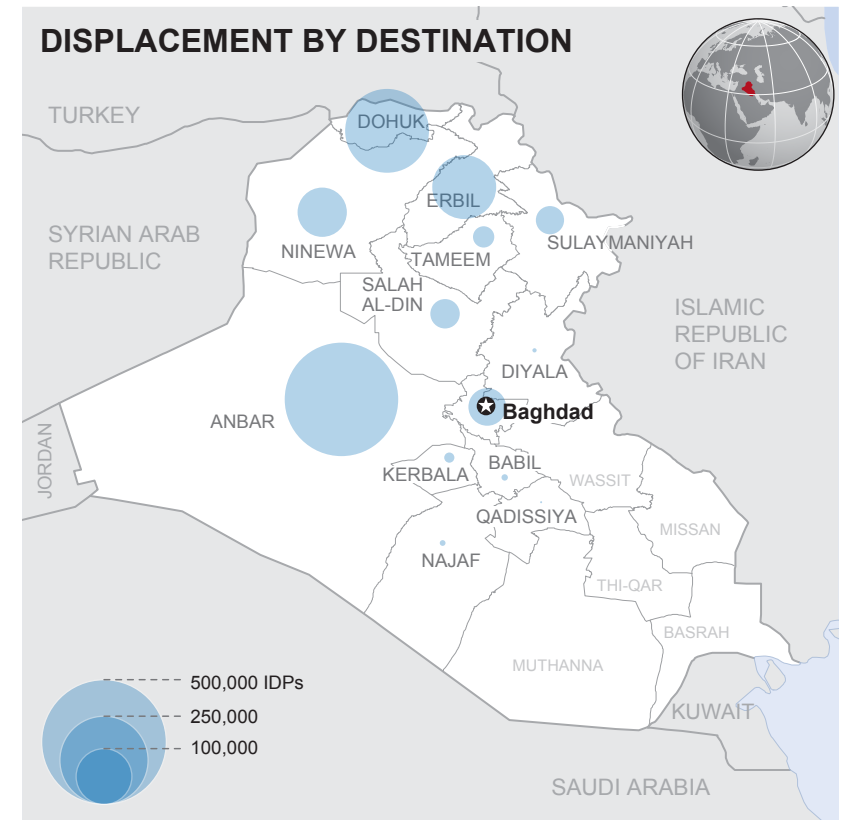

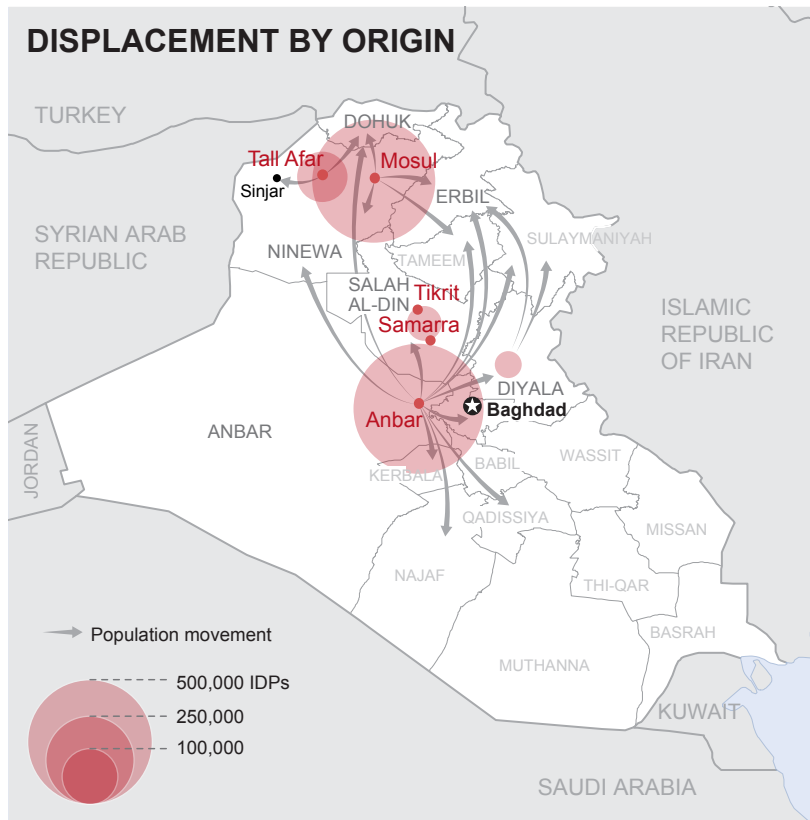

DISPLACEMENT

1.2M newly displaced since Jan 2014

Newly displaced by destination^{1,2}

*Includes Salahudin, Sulaymaniyah, Kirkuk, Kerbala, Babil, Najaf, Diyala and Qadissiya

TIMELINE OF EVENTS³

January

Approximately 85,000 people are internally displaced due to fighting in Anbar Province.

March

Intense fighting centred in Anbar Province cities of Fallujah and Ramadi increases the number of IDPs to 380,000.

February

Continued fighting increases the number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) to approximately 140,000.

Late June

The conflict increases the number of IDPs to 700,000 in central Iraq and 500,000 in northern Iraq.

The boundaries and names shown and the designations used on this map do not imply official endorsement or acceptance by the United Nations.