

Investing in Women

By investing in development, OPIC invests in women

The projects we support....

Reduce indoor air pollution by introducing clean cookstoves to replace rudimentary cooking with wood, dung or charcoal, which is one of the largest health hazards facing women in the developing world

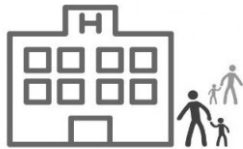

Empower female entrepreneurs

By providing access to financial services to women who are often locked out of the formal banking system

Build affordable housing by partnering with Habitat for Humanity and other groups that provide homes and affordable mortgages to low-income families

Expand access to healthcare by investing in small health clinics and major hospitals that have improved neonatal, postnatal and overall healthcare

Increase food production by supporting the world's smallholder farmers - many who are women - with technology, training and better access to markets
