Looking ahead towards 2030
Eliminating child marriage through a decade of action
If progress from the last 10 years continues, there will be +120 million child brides.

If progress in the past 10 years is doubled, still, nearly 110 million girls will become child brides in the next decade.

If the risk of child marriage remains at today’s levels, there will be +170 million child brides between today and 2030.

To end child marriage by 2030, progress must be 17 times faster than the progress of the last decade.

By 2030, the world’s target is to eliminate child marriage.

Getting to zero will require coordinated action and additional investment.

West and Central Africa will require the most acceleration to eliminate child marriage within the next 10 years.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, where there has been no progress in the past decade, the stagnation must be overcome to bring the region on track towards elimination.

© UNICEF/UNI199287/Dubourthoumieu, © UNICEF/UN0278285/Mersha, © UNICEF/UN0324185/Boro

© UNICEF/UNI159909/Khan

© UNICEF/UNI112029/Slezic

© UNICEF/UNI199287/Dubourthoumieu, © UNICEF/UNI112029/Slezic, © UNICEF/UNI199287/Dubourthoumieu

