Faced with multiple humanitarian and development challenges, Chad needs increased support from the international community to emerge from protracted and recurrent cycles of crises.

CHRONIC UNDERFUNDING
Yet, whilst humanitarian needs are growing the country continues to suffer from years of underfunding.

In 2019, humanitarian partners in Chad need 476.6 million USD to save and improve the lives of the 2.1 million people most in need.

The 2021 humanitarian response plan for Chad aims to provide humanitarian aid to 4 million people among the 5.5 million who need emergency humanitarian aid. Facing three major humanitarian crises—food insecurity and malnutrition, health emergencies, and population displacements as a consequence of armed conflicts and natural disasters—the number of people in need in Chad has grown exponentially.

This increase translates into a rise in necessary funds for the humanitarian response: in 2021, the HRP requires USD 617.5 million, a 13 percent increase compared to the $45.3 million budgeted for the HRP launched in March 2020, and a 25 percent rise in the targeted population. However, the budget is down by 7 percent in comparison with the 664.6 million revised 2020 HRP budget that included the estimated impact of COVID-19 in June 2020.

HUMANITARIAN ISSUES

1. Population movements
2. Food insecurity
3. Malnutrition
4. Disease outbreaks
5. Floods

Summary of the response by strategic objective

1. Save and preserve life and dignity of affected persons through a multisectoral and integrated emergency assistance, according to fundamental rights and standards.
2. Reduce the vulnerability of affected persons through the strengthening of community and institutional resilience in order to better respond and resist to recurrent shocks.
3. Contribute to the protection of vulnerable populations and reinforce accountability towards affected populations.
