OVERVIEW
Since conflict broke out on mid-December 2013, close to 870,000 people have been forced from their homes, including 707,400 people displaced within South Sudan. Despite the cessation of hostilities agreement signed in late January, clashes and insecurity continue to constrain the humanitarian response. So far, over 302,000 people displaced have received assistance. Aid agencies aim to assist 3.2 million people affected by the crisis by June.

Displacement patterns are fluid, and aid agencies are stepping up efforts to track movements to improve analysis of needs.

Rising trend of people fleeing

707,400*
est. people displaced internally as of 13 Feb 2014.

149,700
people sheltering in neighbouring countries

114
IDP locations to respond

Reach of response

Yet to reach 54% of the locations

Reached 46% of locations

DISPLACEMENT
Displacement patterns are fluid, and aid agencies are stepping up efforts to track movements to improve analysis of needs.

Rising trend of people fleeing

*The total number of people displaced is likely higher, as aid agencies have very limited information about displacement outside main population centres.